

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 24 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Some sunshine but sleet and snow central and southern parts.

Today:

Area of sleet and snow southeast Northern Ireland, Wales and southwest England moving east into the Midlands and the south and southeast of England. Sunny spells elsewhere but also wintry showers. Frost early and late. Windy in the far southwest.

Tonight:

Sleet and snow in the south dying out, to leave clear spells. Wintry showers will continue in the north and west. Icy patches forming along with a locally severe frost.

Monday:

Rather cloudy with wintry showers across the north and northwest. Mostly dry and sunny elsewhere. Staying cold with icy patches and frost early and late. Windy across the northeast.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:

Fine, dry and cold initially with a few wintry showers in far north-east. Gradually turning more unsettled from the south-west, with cloud, wind, and outbreaks of rain and hill snow.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.